taxes on line

Hancock County supervisors have allowed the county tax collector/assessor's office to join with the two other coastal counties and use the internet for people to pay property taxes and renew vehicle license tags.

State Auditor Phil Bryant came to Tuesday's Board of Supervisors meeting with county Tax Assessor/Collector Jimmie Ladner:

He asked supervisors to allow Hancock County to join with Harrison and Jackson. Counties in an experimental, pilot program that has already been tried in Rankin, Hines and Madison Counties.

Bryant told supervisors the internet services will be available 24-hours-a-day, seven days a week. Residents will be able to pay property taxes, buy license tags or even fishing licenses using credit cards, bank cards or "e-check," which authorizes direct payment from someone's checking account.

"There is no start-up fee and no cost to the county," said Bryant.

He said the software could be installed using computers currently available in the assessor's office, and the service could be available within

In other related business, Ladner reported to supervisors the computers are being installed in the old Kiln Library off Hwy. 603 and once in operation, the satelite office will provide Diamondhead residents and others living in the northern portions of the county the convenience of buying license tags and paying property taxes in Kiln instead of coming to downtown Bay St. Louis.

really nearly 40 years in Hancock County.

I can remember when the United Way began in Hancock County as the late Powell Glass, owner and publisher of The Echo was among those who helped form the United Way.

I was a campaign co-chair in 1978 for the Hancock County United Way and served as a director, vice-president and president for several times over the years. The combining of Hancock, Harrison and Pearl River into the United Way of South Mississippi, in which I was involved, was really a great move. I still have a receipt for my first United Way contribution in 1956. It was to the United Givers of the Greater Washington, D.C.

Representing the Library's Board of Directors, Mary Cassis read a letter outlining the success of the library system and giving supervisors and the library staff credit for what it has accomplished.

She said the four libraries in the system logged 200,000 checkouts last year, and the summer reading program was a huge success with more than 700 children participating.

Cassis said records sow about 60 percent of Hancock County residents have a library card and usage at all libraries continues to climb.

The library depends mainly on property tax millage, and estimates are it will get $658,000 this fiscal year, along bling funds.

Supervisors were in session more than seven hours, and handled a variety of issues.

•They opened and took under advisement seven bids on the long-delayed beach Tuesday's public hearing there pedestrian walkway and bike munities.

Engineering estimates put the project at $1,261,681.50, and Kappa Development of Gulfport appeared to be the low bidder at $1,274,338.50, but consultants were asked to check out the bid to see if it. complies with specifications, then make a recommendation at the Board's next meeting Sept. 14.

• Supervisors agreed to temporarily loan the Hancock Authority $235,000 in order to pay expenses for the remaining fiscal year, ending Sept. 30. The loan, from millage set aside in a landfill acquisition fund, will be paid back from the Authority's anticipated revenue next year.

• Board President Rocky Pullman got supervisors to pass a resolution asking the Mississippi Highway Patrol to beef up patrols on state Hwy. 43 leading into Pearlington.

District 3 Supervisor Lisa Cowand amended the resolution to also request increased patrolling along Hwy. 607, then as it becomes U.S. Hwy. 90 into Waveland.

· Supervisors will also ask the Sheriff's Department to increase patrols in Leetown, Fenton and the Catahoula com-

 Supervisors concurred in Port and Harbor recommendations to spend $1.44 million on rail storage and track additions at the Port Bienville Industrial Park, and another $159,950 for engineering designs to continue planning for improvements to the runway and lighting at Stennis International Airport.

 They listened to, but took no action on a request by the Waveland Little League, for a donation towards $30,000 in County Regional Solid Waste improvements planned for the ballfields at Central and Coleman Avenues.

· A consultant with Brown and Mitchell told supervisors he was still investigating alternate ways to bring in the estimated 120,000 cubic yards of sand that would be needed to renourish the beach from Clermont Harbor to Bayou Caddy. He said the project would require 6,000 truck loads, and there were concerns the heavy trucks might damage Beach Boulevard.

move, he said, was that bus drivers have historically been among the lowest-paid employees in the district, and he was trying to bring their salaries up more in line with other non-certified personnel. If the district were to give across-the-board raises, he said, bus drivers would still be lowest "on the totem pole."

Board members Lynette Necaise, Billie Faye Lyons and Larry Peterson, however, continued to push for raises for other personnel in the interest of fairness. After cafeteria workers spoke Tuesday, Lyons told Ladner she would like to explore the possibility of giving a seven percent across-theboard wage increase -- on top of the already-increased wages for the position to 12 months.

Lyons said her research had indicated the measure would $40,000 per year.

Board President Cheryl Bennett told the assembled cafeteria workers that the board had heard their plea, and agreed with them in many respects. Bennett said the board and Ladner would work together to explore the budget at a special workshop meeting sometime around Sept. 18 to and see if there were any way to raise additional funds for further wage increases.

As cafeteria workers filed out of the board's meeting room. Pulstache said she was pleased with the board's response and that she felt they would honor the cafeteria workers' requests. "And if not," she said, "We'll be back."

Also on Tuesday, the board clashed with Ladner once again over his proposed changes in the district transportation department.

Among items on the board's agenda for the evening was Ladner's recommendation to reclassify the transportation secretary position to "administrative assistant," and to increase the work schedule for board:

Council -- wobbly

has strong backing from the Mississippi Development Authority, and the Hancock County Board of Supervisors. Each has pledged $500,000 loan guarantees toward the insistent that the project is a total $1.5 million in capital MPT needs to build a structure at Port Bienville.

The third loan guarantee from the city of Bay St. Louis had appeared secure when council agreed to sign a letter of intent last month. Officials noted that Gagne has millions of dollars in sight for research and development projects for the national Department of Defense.

Gagne also has $200,000 to escrow, covering initial debt retirement costs. And he has pledged to personally guarantee repayment of the remainder if the project doesn't pan out.

Tuesday, Walters said he and his staff have confirmed the Defense contract negotiations, and are satisfied with the personal financial paperwork that Gagne has supplied to prove his ability to stand behind the loan payments if necessary. In a worst-case scenario, said Walters: the city, the county and the state would wind up coowners of a 20,000-square-foot structure at Port Bienville.

Still, at-large council member Bill Taylor questioned why Gagne couldn't secure conventional loan financing for the new enterprise, and he said the city would be setting a precedent it may later regret by helping finance a new business.

Ward 1 council member Doug Seal said he's spoken to at least 100 constituents on the matter - all of them wondering "why are we spending money to start somebody else's business?" Ward 3 council member Connie Lampley said residents of her ward have those same questions. And, she added, If it doesn't work, the only people they're going to look at are the people at this table. Overall, I think I have a right to be concerned...I still have some soul searching to do."

Even the city's staffer who's. been working with Walters and Gagne on the idea, Buz Olsen, had a somewhat chilled stance Tuesday. Asked for his opinion after reviewing Gagne's p al statements, Olsen replied, "I didn't see any red flags."

He also reminded council . that the venture is a research

Industrial Park. His proposal and development enterprise. "There's risk, right?" said Olsen. Mayor Eddie Favre made no comment when asked his own opinion.

Walters, meanwhile, was winner. The state Development Authority's backing is one assurance of that, he said, noting that in over 100 similar loans for business development in the state, not one has gone into default. That's because the state is so thorough in its investigations prior to backing a project, said Walters.

He and Gagne also stressed that the new company would create spin-off developments. Gagne said the operation would have a "catalytic effect," spawning many new businesses in the area.

MPT probably will have $200 million in federal defense contracts, Walters told council, because the polymer plastic that Gagne has patented is "extremely unique," and exactly the type of substance the government hopes to put to use.

Gagne said one key reason he selected Mississippi for the research and development activity is the University of Southern Mississippi's outstanding work in the polymer field. Walters said over 90 percent of USM's graduates in the field, however, have to leave the state to find work.

Gagne said he would tap that graduating pool for hightech, high-salary positions at his facility. "We will become a cornerstone" enterprise, he said, with other new businesses resulting, bringing diversity to the area economy.

Many metropolitan areas furnish physical facilities for start-up research and development endeavors, said Gagne. The state of Arkansas offered to give MPT a building outright, he told council. He opted for Mississippi instead, he added, because of USM and the asset of being located at Port in spending than he proposed Bienville. Gagne said his firm will have invested some, $30 million in the next three to four years. Still, he said, private venture capital is not available to build the facility needed to get the enterprise off the two cities and the county, based ground. "There's not a lot of on the number of animals high tech enterprise" in this taken there from each entity. area, he said, "especially in polymer science. There is the culations show that Bay St. problem of how do you get Louis should provide a $25,000

He said Hancock County Board of Supervisors have agreed to proceed with the $500,000 loan agreement, but can't proceed in a three-way agreement until the city of Bay St. Louis gives its commitment

"Our backs are up against the wall," said Gagne.

Council member Tad Black said he's had some calls of concern from constituents in his Ward 4, and he acknowledged a "small risk" exists in the proposal. "But I think we need to get involved" in the proposal, said Black. "I'm very excited about it. I'm in favor of it."

Council president James Thriffiley, representing Ward 2, also expressed enthusiasm for the proposal, saying any fears over its chances should be allayed by the money MPT will have in escrow, Gagne's personal financial guarantee, and the public ownership of the building that will be constructed.

Council took no action on the matter Tuesday, but promised a final answer in two weeks. Bids for construction of the facility are due to be opened on Oct. 7, council was told.

In an unrelated matter, council heard a pitch for supporting "Project Impact," a civil defense-oriented project aimed at promoting "disaster-resistant" communities. Hancock County has been picked as the lead agency in a $300,000 federal grant to get the project off the ground. The county, Waveland and Bay St. Louis would have to come up with $100,000 in matching money or "in-kind" efforts.

Council recessed its formal meeting until next Tuesday, and held a public hearing on the proposed fiscal year 2000 budget, a $10.9 million spending plan.

Favre reemphasized the "tight" nature of the package. which contains $1.1 million less for the current fiscal year.

Still, council has to consider a recent request for additional funding at the Waveland Animal Shelter. That facility is funded proportionately by the

Aube returns to Sea Wolves

The Mississippi Sea Wolves have announced that J. F. Aube, the team's leading scorer from the 1999-00 season, will return for the 2000-01 season.

The 6'0" right wing from Terrebonne, Quebec led the Sea Wolves in goals with 27 and assists with 41, scoring 68 points in 67 games. He also led the team in multi-point games.

Aube, 27, was forced to sit out the final three regular season games and all but the last playoff game due to a late-season concussion.

He will rejoin Head Coach Al Pedersen, who was behind the bench in Pensacola during the 1997-98 season when Aube helped lead that team to the Kelly Cup Finals.

In his five seasons as a professional, Aube has a total of 134 goals and 224 assists for 358 points in 306 games.

His becomes the fourth veteran signed by the Sea Wolves for next season. Under ECHL rules, the team can only have four veterans under contract for the season.

Fire Dogs post season party

The purple flowers have several buds on the branch tips. The velvety, deep green leaves are lined in orange and are among the most striking of any plant. The leaves change to an orange or bronze as they age, hence they are almost as eyecatching as the purple flowers.

Princess Flower bloom best if grown in full sun. The bloom cycles off and on throughout the season, with the heaviest bloom in mid- to late-summer

Prune leggy branches to stimulate more growth and blooms. They prefer welldrained, slightly acidic, organic-rich beds.

The Tibouchina grandiflora, or large-leafed Princess Flower. is starting to find its way to garden centers in the Southeast and is among the most exotic and tropical. These leaves are huge and fuzzy, but the flowers are produced on large panicles with dozens opened at once.

It is not very hard to grow

one in a container or dig and overwinter the plant. The most serious requirement is to not over-water it. Keep it dry during the winter.

Those of you who like to propagate plants will find it easy to root from greenwoodtype cuttings placed in moist sand in a shady location. They can also be grown from seed.

Tropical plants are at the top of the popularity list, and those with blooms like the Princess Flower make it hard to say no to them for your garden.
